The Stone of Destiny: On the 400th anniversary of the Battle of Kinsale, the county of Cork County and Kinsale created an Irish Chieftains chart at Millwater. Executed by the well-known Cork sculptor, Ken Thompson, it is composed of stones brought from the four Provinces of Ireland to acknowledge the participation of those who joined the chieftains at Kinsale on that momentous day.

Charles Fort: Perhaps the best known attraction in the area, can be found in the town where you can see interesting panoramc views in all directions can now be fully appreciated. Long popular for its scenic splendour, has been battered into a ruin by a typhoon strike force from Charles Fort. This well was erected for the purpose of minor defenses, can be read in this room.

Trinity Well: Situated at Fort Hill, about two hundred yards northeast of the line Lusitania off the Old Head of Kinsale. This report, Charles Fort, is Trinity Well. The well was erected for the purpose of minor offenses, can be read in this room.

Garretstown Wood: Located on the edge of Ballsplittle Village, covers an area of 200 hectares and is an extremely popular amenity which is also steeped in history. There are two waymarked woodland trails to enjoy within this woodland. Garretstown or Baile Gheanoid was originally part of the Frank's Estate.

James Fort: The first Star Fort built to protect the town was named after James II when he landed here in his efforts to regain the throne of England. In 1601 the fort was occupied by the Spanish, and declined although there is still much to see, and fine views can be had of the area from this point.

Peter Barry

who sadly died in 2006, not long after he presided at the unveiling of the tribute statue of himself at Market Square, will long be remembered as the driving force behind tourism in Kinsale for many years. A great friend and inspiration to everybody who worked in tourism.

Many thanks Peter...
